COMPREHENSION

Once upon a time there was a village called Ramnagar. It was quite a large village and it lay near a wide river. The land was rich and fertile, and the people who lived there were happy and wealthy. They had no enemies and lived peacefully. They troubled no one and no one troubled them.

Ten miles away from the village there was a town. One day the people of the town held a meeting. All the townsfolk gathered in the market place. The people of the town were going to discuss a new plan for a road. The road was going to be built between their town and another town, about twenty miles away. A large map of the area was brought and soon a route was worked out. The people decided how much they were going to spend on building the road.
